Q: Multiple Threads - detect duplicates and check memory usage
I have a 3-5mb pcap file and I want to use multiple threads to scan it so I can detect duplicates. Ideally, the result I need is a list of all the pcaps in the file with duplicates removed. I have a fairly good idea of how I could do this - I would create a threadsafe queue to store the pcaps and then spawn a thread for each pcap. I have no idea how to test for duplicates though. I've read about using the Packet Manager, but I am unsure how to actually use it. I've also looked at PCAP library "Detect duplicate entries". It didn't seem to do much. I'm using python if that makes a difference. Any suggestions for a reliable way to detect duplicates would be much appreciated. A:
