Because of their extraordinary cytotoxic properties, the C-3-substituted carbamoyl oximes have received considerable attention as potential antineoplastic agents. In fact, U.S. Pat. No. 3,927,213 and U.S. Pat. No. 3,962,442 describe the antineoplastic activity of a variety of C-3 substituted carbamoyl oximes. However, even though the compounds are shown to be active in the in vitro tests, the compounds demonstrate a lack of activity when tested against murine tumors in vivo, i.e., systems where the compound is administered to the tumor-bearing host. Furthermore, the reported oral LD<sub>50</sub> values indicate that the carbamoyl oximes are not very orally effective, which severely limits their usefulness as chemotherapeutic agents. U.S. Pat. No. 4,071,550 discloses that certain C-3-substituted carbamoyl oximes are effective in the treatment of certain leukemia when administered intraperitoneally or orally. However, the administration of the compounds was in the form of an oil-in-water emulsion. These emulsions are not very convenient for administration to the patient, and the patent does not teach that these compounds will exhibit antineoplastic activity when administered in other forms, e.g., in aqueous solution.
